Rec Committees Seek To Retain Their Jobs Here

Members of the recently deposed recreation and swimming pool committees for the city met with the Belle Glade City Commission and City Manager Clarence Robinson Wednesday night in an unofficial council session to seek reasons why they had been dismissed by the council through the repeal of Ordinance 900 which created the bodies.

George Wedgworth of the recreation committee acted as spokesman for the 20 or more interested persons who attended the two-hour session. Wedgworth sought the answers to five questions: 1) Why had the action been taken? 2) What created an emergency? 3) Why haven't the committees been satisfactory? 4) How were they relieved of their jobs? 5) Why were they fired on an emergency ordinance basis?

To be fired without reason, Wedgworth said, "without a hearing or notice, is a reflection on each of our committee." Commissioner R. W. Lanier said he would read a prepared statement which would shorten the meeting and clarify the position Wedgworth counted with.

"We didn't come up here for a prepared statement. It probably won't answer our questions."

The city's statement cited the valuable work the committees had done and stated that the city regretted any misunderstanding which had arisen.

"In making decisions, especially when it comes to decisions of government, it is impossible for groups to act at times without error."

The members of the football team selected Molly Forsee as queen of homecoming at a meeting Wednesday afternoon.

Churches Of Christ, Scientist

The vital necessity of individualization of the teachings of Christ Jesus will be emphasized at Christian Science Services Sunday.

Following the Lesson-Sermon entitled "Doctrine of Atonement" is the Golden Text which reads: "Turn us again, O Lord God of hosts, cause thy face to shine; and we shall be saved." Selections to be read from "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy include the following (25:28-31): "Implicit faith in the Teacher and all the emotional love we can bestow on him, will never alone make us imitators of him. We must go and do likewise, else we are not improving the great blessings which our Master would bestow and suffered to bestow upon us."

From the Bible will be read Matthew 23:23-24 (Matthew 23:27): "Therefore if any man be in Christ, he is a new creature: old things are passed away; behold, all things are become new."

presented an almost flawless defense of their end zone. Ferrara intimidated in published reports that the ramp would have been worse if the flu bug had stayed away from the Tigers.

The Rams had a Glassy stare in their eyes as Tiger halfback Glen Glass almost had a one-man show with 181 yards in 19 carries.

Bucky Hood went over the Ram goal from three yards out early in the first period. In the second stanza a Glassy-tossed Ross passed 59 yards and Glass went over from the two. Jimmy Fry's toe made it 13-0.

Belle Glade's Larry Harris tossed a pass into the end zone which was snared by Glass who got back to the one yard line as the half ended.

The Rams came close in the third quarter but fumbled on the two where the Tigers took over and marched to pay dirt with Glass going the last 26. Fry's placement was perfect, and the third quarter score was 20-0.

Grant and Hamilton found the end zone for the Rams in the fourth period. Clewiston then drove to the four, lost the ball on downs and then broke up a pass attempt and scored a safety when the Rams couldn't get the ball out of the end zone.

The Rams then kicked from their 20 and the Tigers got the ball back to the Belle Glade. Glass went over tackle and went all the way for the final score. Again, Jack Hamilton was Belle Glade's stellar defender.

Clewiston got 220 yards on the ground, completed 14 first downs. Their punting average was 30 yards. They were set back 65 yards on penalties. Belle Glade got 13 first downs, got 191 yards on the ground and also averaged 30 yards punting while completing three passes.

80-year-old S. J. Fisher was elected mayor by a split vote. Thus, Fisher became mayor for the fourth time. He previously served terms in 1950-51 and 1953-55.

The council voted to table the election of a building inspector and water superintendent. Dorothy Mott will also serve as tax collector and assessor.

They came Councilman Ray Sullivan's motion to name Henry Elfers mayor on the basis of his large vote. Oct. 8, Councilman Kelley nominated Fisher and Wheeler and Fisher joined Kelley in the vote that defeated Elfers.

As Kelley turned over the gavel to Fisher he said, "I hope that all of us will leave our personalities at home. Let's all work for South Bay."

Elfers was then named vice mayor. Sullivan motioned to name Henry Elfers mayor on the basis of his large vote. Oct. 8, Councilman Kelley nominated Fisher and Wheeler and Fisher joined Kelley in the vote that defeated Elfers.

Reorganization of the Cub Scout Pack for this area is under way and is shaping up fine, according to Jack Hollingsworth, new pack master. However, in the Southeast section of town the pack is very much in need of one Den mother for a full den of eight boys that have no leadership and could possibly use two Den mothers for this area. Other Den mothers who have volunteered and their assistants are as follows: Northwest section, Mrs. M. E. Ludlow, Den mother, Mrs. S. J. Smith, Jr., assistant; Mrs. Hymie Peatman, Den mother, Mrs. Basil Cook, Assistant; Chosen, Mrs. L. B. Keeler, Den mother, Mrs. R. V. Cress, Jr., Assistant; South section, Mrs. Robert Gressinger, Jr., as Den mother upon her return from Ohio.

In South Bay there are two full dens with Mrs. O'Neill Walker, Den mother, Assistant, Mrs. Kelly Willis; Mrs. Glemann McGhee Den mother with Mrs. Ford assistant.

Boys eligible to be cub scouts may call Jack Hollingsworth at WY 6-2907. The first pack meeting will be held at Jamison Hall Thursday, Oct. 24 at 7:30 p. m. All parents are requested to accompany their boys or to send a parent.

Mrs. G. E. Fraser is also Den mother in S. E. section.

Parents of club members were asked to come to the park if they wish to attend on Monday evening with their 4-H daughters.

Mr. Van Horn, vice president of the association, said the principal topic of discussion centered around methods of promoting more traffic over U. S. 441. The group also discussed the rerouting of the highway.

Recommendations presented were that the highway be changed south of Kissimmee to make the old U. S. 27 a 441 alternate since the completion of the new U. S. 27. The new U. S. 27 misses such cities as Avon Park, Sebring and Lake Wales.

By adopting this plan, Van Horn said, Belle Glade would be by-passed by motorists on their way to and from Miami.

Van Horn said he would seek Belle Glade Chamber of Commerce support opposing such a plan.

Paul Rogers Sees Developments Of Ramie Program

So great is the interest in the development of the ramie industry of Florida in the nation's capital that as soon as Congressman Paul G. Rogers of the Sixth Florida Congressional district arrived back in his home city here he checked at the offices and display room of the Florida Ramie Inc. here to discover what was new in the fast-paced activities of the local Ramie corporation. The Congressman soon found himself the center of a group of friends who were visiting the offices to also view the Ramie display of a wide variety of fabrics milled from ramie fiber and to view the film depicting the rapid progress of Palm Beach county industry as depicted in the film story of ramie harvesting and processing on the lands and in the plants of Pierce Florida Ramie Inc. Never one to lose the opportunity for a good-time for himself his friends, Board Chairman Edgar G. Hamilton of Pierce Florida Ramie Inc., soon had the situation settled into a full-fledged home-coming reception for the Congressman. As Rep. Rogers was about to join some of his fellow citizens in acquiring some participation in the ramie industry, Chairman Hamilton confronted him with a buffet supper and it wasn't long before the fellow citizens were joining the Congressman.

"I just hope I can hold them with me until election time next year," Rep. Rogers commented. Meanwhile photographers and television film men got busy to picture the lively gathering as pretty Dawn Cope crowned the congressional head with a Dobbs Ramie hat and President J. B. Powell of Pierce Florida Ramie Inc. broke out some half-and-half ramie fiber for inspection by the congressman. This consisted of sheafs of ramie strands with the top half still green from the field while the bottom half had been processed to a snow white in the Belle Glade plant of the Ramie corporation.

On hand to help with the celebration was former Florida State Security Director Jerry Thomas, who, as head of the Jerry Thomas Investment Bank of Palm Beach is now engaged in handling the stock issue of the corporation.

RAMIE OFFICIAL

Palm Beach County and Jack Musselman of Broward County, welcomed Hamilton and his display.

Hamilton's exhibits and film showed how ramie is processed from the fields of the Canal Point plant and the specially invented equipment of the processing plant at Belle Glade. He explained the benefits to the state from the new system of processing ramie fiber ready for the textile mills.

"There are up to 400,000 acres of land in the southeastern part of the state adaptable and available for the growing of ramie," Hamilton said. "If you translate that into dollars," he continued, "it would come up to some $200,000,000 annually."

Hamilton's remarks pointed out that ramie is the strongest fiber known to man. It is resistant to abrasion; it won't shrink or stretch; it won't mold or mildew. It can be used for industrial conveyor belts, carpeting, and other new products where the qualities of great strength and resistance to abrasion are required. Ramie can also be used for tablecloths, pillow slips, handkerchiefs, dish towels and much more.

Last year, Hamilton went on, two and one quarter million pounds of ramie fiber were exported from 2,400 acres of ramie. Pierce system showed test cuttings which indicate the possibility of 1,500 pounds per acre.

The big secret of ramie processing to make the fiber ready for the spindles of textile plants and the Pierce system," Hamilton said, "proves that machinery can clean ramie fiber and keep it straight and parallel."

With the Pierce methods the fibers are kept straight and parallel through all stages of processing and it can be cut in even lengths for stapling and can be opened on present cotton spinning machinery.

Hamilton pointed out that this development means all ramie can be processed in the United States without being sent overseas.

The ramie official told the legislators that ramie can be produced and processed at a competitive cost making it possible for the finished materials to become household or commercial items of general use.

The legislators were further told of how ramie can be combined with other natural or synthetic fibers, such as cotton, wool, nylon, rayon or dacron wool, nylon, rayon or dacron wear materials were a natural for such combinations.

He concluded by saying: "I think of ramie and the expansion of our industry in terms of a civic proposition in that it can mean so much to the state of Florida and that it should be accepted as an independent industry and while we have had group after group wanting to come in and take over our company, lock, stock and barrel, it is our ambition to hold it as an independently managed and Florida-owned company, open to ownership by as many of our average citizens as possible."

of approximately 8,000 cubic feet per second, and the Caloosahatchie has a capacity of approximately 4,000 CFS when there is no inflow from its tributary area. Two and a half times this total outflow has been known to come from Fish-eating Creek alone, and the Kissimmee has been known to come raging with even more than that. The use of Lake Okeechobee as a conservation or storage pool with three supplemental storage areas and the connecting main canals, is the basis of the plan for maintaining a reasonably constant water table in the 750,000-acre Agricultural Area.

The farmers on the mainland are generally pleased with the operation of the facilities of Central & Southern Florida Flood Control facilities this year.

The Palm Beach County football picture is beginning to take shape despite the fact there have been only one game played between the three teams involved. The Bobcats, having lost their opener to WPB, still have an excellent chance to win the county championship.

A Word Used by Clarence Bittling TO DESCRIBE PROCESSING of Agricultural Products

Is Inviting The Glades!

The Florida area east and south of Alachua County imports some 300,000 tons of dairy feed annually with a bill amounting to approximately 18 to $20,000,000.

ROUGHAGE ALONE SUPPORTS 8,500 LB. MILK OUTPUT

A lot of farmers are learning how important high quality roughage can be in a dairy operation, and they're mighty glad they have, says Dr. W. S. Griffith, associate dairy husbandman at Virginia Polytechnic Institute.

He points out that no cow has enough roughage until she has more than she can eat every day.

Cows like a little variety in their diet. During the winter, a combination of hay and silage gives some variety for a little money. In summer it's a good idea to feed good hay along with pasture. You can get more food into your cow from cheap sources, and you can get by with less grain, says Griffith.

Some dairymen think a cow won't produce milk unless she gets some grain. But research indicates, reports Griffith, that a cow with the roughage alone to produce 10,000 lbs. milk will produce about 8,500 lbs. of milk.

Many milk producers would have more real income, Griffith feels, if they developed a good roughage program and put less emphasis on grain feeding. The cheaper milk is the milk a cow makes from roughage.

Jersey Journal, 5-20-57

FEEDS Dairy Cattle

The very high nitrogen in Gladeslands has always produced forage of 15 to 18% protein, according to scientists (some plants run as high as 25%) and carbohydrates are available in sugar cane, corn, sorghums, and other grains, BUT it has been equally recognized by dairymen and scientists that the 80 to 90% moisture content of these forages has prevented the milk cow from consuming enough to maintain her weight and natural milk-making abilities.

MECHANICAL DEWATERING (squeezing the moisture down to approximately 70%) is successfully practiced in Europe and in Florida. This was first demonstrated noticeably in the citrus pulp industry. Through this method Florida farmers are able to commence artificial drying of forages with a 70% moisture which places them on a basis with driers of Alfalfa in the west.

Common grasses in the Glades (Para, Crib, Pangola and St. Augustine) according to Everglades Experiment Station contain as much or more chlorophyll, carotene and xanthophyll than does the midwest Alfalfa. Dewatering and artificially drying makes available to the animal these vitamins and the unusually high protein.

Dairymen using these dry feeds certify that cattle are generally healthier, are less susceptible to bungs, calve more easily and do not lose unnecessary time from the milking barn at calving time, and that calves are brought to weal or replacement stage much more successfully.

Forages are a natural feed for cattle — their digestive system is designed for forage, and demonstrated methods insure success in getting Gladeslands forages to the animal at a profit. IF ONLY FREIGHT from midwest sources IS SAVED.

LAWRENCE E. (Okeelanta) WILL

Cemetery Heights, Florida

Some of you can remember when the Smithsonian Institute, in the winter of 1933-34 had a couple of hundred W.P.A. laborers, armed with tiny wooden mustard-spoon spades, digging into the mounds on the western edge of Belle Glade. They never did finish the job (you know how W.P.A.'ers worked), but what they discovered gives us a pretty clear picture of how the first settlers of Belle Glade lived, as well as providing a revealing glimpse into the geologic history of this part of the Everglades. Also we are inclined to marvel at the titanic amount of labor involved in the construction of these mounds. The long haired scientists can't seem to quite agree whether these mounds were begun 2000 or only 1000 years ago, but at any rate, they seem to have been there quite a spell.

There are two mounds situated near the forks of the now obliterated Democrat River, and on opposite sides of its south branch, specifically, at Avenue D west of 18th Street. The larger, called the Shell, or Habitation Mound, is now covered by modern dwellings. The Sand, or Burial Mound lies 100 yards southwest of it in the midst of a well sodded pasture, its northern edge bordered by a grove of tall bamboo.

Recent years of cultivation and erosion have reduced the heights of both mounds. The Shell and Sand Mounds are now respectively about 7 and 4 1/2 feet above the surrounding land. During the hurricane of 1929 the water level in Joe Cherry's house, nearby, as measured later by instrument, was found to have been 11 1/2 feet. Yet during that same night some twenty people, including Joe's sister and her husband, had been crowded on the Shell Mound and reported that the lake waters had never reached its top.

The Shell Mound, on which prehistoric people had lived continuously from the time of its beginning, is nothing but a glorified garbage dump. It is composed of the shells and animal bones remaining from their meals, as well as broken kitchen pots, tools and household furniture. Archaeologists call it a "middens" and from it can tell you how these aborigines ate, lived and worked.

As this shell heap measures 100 by 150 yards in extent and 15 feet in thickness, it must represent a prodigious number of meals. Toward the south end of this mound (where Walter Bamford's house stands), originally there had been an elevation two or three feet higher than the rest. The long haired burials it was the platform for some of the mounds. The mound, then, of course, it might have been the home of the family with the biggest appetite. Remains of many house pots, rectangular plates, indicate that this mound was no temporary camping place.

Except for some evolution in the design of pottery, the degree of culture of these people changed but little during the centuries until the coming of the Spaniards, soon after which time the mounds appear to have been abandoned. This Shell Mound seems to be about the same construction from bottom to top, but the Burial Mound was actually several mounds, one above another. First was a mound of shells, then the Old Muck Mound, on top of which was the First Sand Mound, then the Final Sand Mound which now protrudes above the ground.

The Burial Mound, itself, began as a midden, or habitation level, composed of broken, pebbled shells, and starting, apparently, on bed rock. Although, at the time of the excavations, this level was partly submerged, yet the majority of tools and artifacts in this mound were found to be of the same workmanship as a couple of thousand years ago, this bed rock was dry land, at least during part of the year.

Later, this location was used for burials. It would seem that even at this later period the soil was not deep enough for interments, so much was carried in to cover the dead. In time it became the Old Muck Mound, which was 80 or 90 feet in diameter. We don't know how high, for the enormous weight of sand later heaped upon it had compacted it into a rubbery mass about four feet in thickness and literally check-full of bones, all in disorder but in a good state of preservation.

On top of this mound and on the side facing the Democrat River and the midden mound, a rather remarkable plaza was uncovered. It had been constructed of flat limestone tiles of irregular sizes and shapes, fitted together to form a pavement. The archaeologists were unable to explain its purpose, though we incline to the belief that those redskins might have used it for their Saturday night square dances.

Eventually, the Indians decided to use sand instead of muck for their burials, and the Muck Mound became completely enveloped in sand. During the period between the beginnings of these mounds and the time they were abandoned, the surrounding area was level and remained high. The mounds were the result of decaying vegetation being the 10 or 12 foot deposit of muck which now covers this territory.

In the process, it enveloped the bases of both mounds. What is visible, then, instead of being sand or shell deposition, is really the tops of these mounds protruding through the muck. While this land-building process was going on, the Sand Mound was partially destroyed by several successive hurricanes, which washed down and spread out the sand for a considerable distance. It was in this water-washed sand that many of the carved wooden ceremonial objects as well as human bones were found.

There seems to have been one period when the Shell Mound must have become overpopulated, for we find that people also lived for a time on the Old Sand Mound. We presume some enterprising breech-clouted redneck staked out choice spots in his new Cemetery Heights Subdivision and sold them for 40 cove shells down and a basket of clams every new moon. At any rate, the new location was not popular, for the housewives finding skeletons in every closet, so it reverted again to a burial ground. New interments required more sand, and the Final Sand Mound was erected at about the center of the First. With the new mound added to the others, the Old Muck Mound was eventually covered with sand to a depth of 20 feet. Where all this sand came from is to us a mystery, for the nearest sand known was the beach at Bacom's Point, seven miles away.

Imagine the stupendous amount of labor involved in scooping up buckets of sand and transporting them in canoes across the lake until the heap would have covered a city block, and then to the roof of a two story building. Presumably they had no Wage-Hour Law in those days. Despite this stupendous accumulation of labor, it seems never to be enough. Old interments were scattered in making new burials, so that most of the bones were scattered and broken and complete skeletons quite rare. Such as were discovered were found to have been placed in extended position on their backs.

By examining the fragments scattered through the habitation mound, we may learn considerable of the lives of these primitive people. Their food appeared to have been mostly shellfish and game. Pottery, rather crude, was used at all periods, and is classified as Belle Glade Plain, Okeechobee and Biscayne types. Although most vessels were not ornamented, some of the later ones bore designs in curves or stamped in checked patterns.

Pottery pendents and smoking pipes were also discovered. Conch shells served many purposes. By drilling a hole through the side and inserting a handle, it became an adze, a pick or a hoe. By removing the central columella, it was a handy cup or dipper. The columella, itself was useful as a chisel, a hammer or an awl. Shark and porpoise teeth were used in smoothing and engraving articles of wood, of which many skillfully shaped and carved objects were found.

These included ornamental plaques, lifelike figures of animals, birds and men. One of the latter, 12 inches in height, represented a man standing with folded arms, a hair-knot on the back of his head. Many slender pins of bone, five to ten inches in length once adorned such trophies. There was also a low four-legged stool and a blender used in making fire with a rotating drill.

Stone implements included smoothing bones, weights and sinkers, tubes and bars, as well as projectile points. Some of these flint arrowheads had apparently originated in the Tampa area. One grisly relic was a bowl fashioned from a human skull. From interesting objects found in the topmost layers, which indicated that plunder from Spanish galleons wrecked on the Keys had eventually reached Lake Okeechobee. Beads of glass, silver and copper, and some fashioned from gold coins as well as ornaments obviously made in South America are examples, not to mention a ship's spike, fragments of Spanish olive jars, a cannon ball and iron tools.

During the time that the drab W.P.A.'ers were engaged in their funeral pursuit, a vivid contrast was afforded by a group of gaudy Seminole who were encamped among the bamboo at the mound's edge. They had been brought by W. Stanley Hansen from Ft. Myers to stimulate interest in his Seminole Indian Association. The savages appeared to be stoically unconcerned in the examining of their prehistoric ancestors.

The fact that Mr. Hansen was a physician may be immaterial, but it seems to prove what we have always believed, that doctors and undertakers like to work in cahoots.

(Editor's Note) Above article is based on report of investigations made by the Smithsonian Institution and the State of Florida, under direction of M. W. Stirling, Chief of Bureau of Indian Ethnology, and Vernon Lammie, State Archaeologist, as published by Yale University Press, 1949. Also on report by Kelsey Blanton, Florida representative of the Smithsonian, and comments by Herman Gunter, State Geologist, published in Tampa Tribune, 1935.

The Wilderness Brigade by Phyllis Gordon Demarest is the intriguing story of a private in the Union Army - runaway from Salisbury prison finds himself in the midst of a private war. He made himself the enemy of a member of the Wilderness Brigade - a band of rugged deserters and mountaineers - the only man who got him back to northern lines. How Ross Banning became a guest at a plantation, how his strange attraction for the lady of the house complicated his attempt to return to the North and how he became involved in a stealthy war within a war - are the elements of this timely story.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. Mary McLendon and Mrs. Warren.

How many tomatoes can a vine hold?

...use DITHANE M-22

After using DITHANE M-22 (manly) for disease control, a lot of growers remark how the vines look so crowded with big, choice tomatoes. No one has yet counted the exact number per acre, but experienced gardeners have made up their minds to try DITHANE M-22 with other types of fungicides. DITHANE M-22 results in maximum yields because it gives maximum protection from late blight, gray leaf spot, early blight, and Septoria leaf spot. With this manganoxy-containing fungicide, vines also develop a greener and more luxuriant foliage. Use DITHANE M-22 and see.

RHOthane FOR INSECTS

For better tomato insect control, use RHOthane with DITHANE. RHOthane checks fruitworms, hornworms, pinworms, and pyralids.

Be careful! RHOthane is not a fumigant. It is a contact insecticide. It is not to be used on or around humans, dogs, cats, or other animals.
